For the first time, Jharkhand's traditional greetings "Johar" will resonate at the World Economic Forum (WEF) Annual Meeting, scheduled to be held in Davos from 19 to 23 January 2026, marking the participation of Chief Minister Shri Hemant Soren as a tribal public representative on this global platform.

Through this engagement, Jharkhand is accelerating its efforts to showcase its potential and government support across key sectors such as critical minerals, mining, electronics and electronics components manufacturing, electric vehicles and automobiles, renewable energy, textiles, tourism, and forest-based products, while advancing steadily towards its Vision 2050.

With the objective of strengthening these initiatives, placing Jharkhand firmly on the global map, and positioning it among India's leading states, a Jharkhand state government delegation will participate in the World Economic Forum Annual Meeting in Davos, Switzerland.

The Chief Minister's visit to Davos aims to present Jharkhand as a major investment destination, rich with opportunities, establishing direct dialogue with leaders of global industry, and advance new investment prospects in the State's priority sectors. Discussions with multinational and international organisations on potential investments and engagements will be a key focus, alongside positioning Jharkhand as a state with "infinite opportunities", as it marks its 25 th year .

Central Government and Other States to Participate

The India Pavillion will be represented at the WEF by a Union Government delegation, along with delegations from several states. For the India Pavilion at the forum, the Central Government has selected six states, including Jharkhand. Jharkhand will participate with the theme "Growth in Harmony with Nature."

The meeting may also be attended by U.S. President Donald Trump, and is expected to see participation from approximately 3,000 representatives from nearly 130 countries at Davos 2026. The overarching themes of the World Economic Forum 2026 are "A Spirit of Dialogue" and "Unlocking New Sources of Growth," under which key global economic issues will be deliberated.

About the World Economic Forum

The World Economic Forum is widely regarded as one of the most influential global platforms. It brings together heads of state, policymakers, industry leaders, and financial institutions from across the world to deliberate on economic, technological, commercial, and strategic issues. The State Government believes that Jharkhand's presence on this platform will facilitate direct engagement with global industrial leaders and decision-makers, contributing to economic growth in the State, enabling future generations to better understand global challenges, and accelerating employment generation.
